

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a process of cosmetic or pharmaceutical formulations immediately before use, in which two or more liquid components from separate stock chambers are mixed intimately with one another by passing the liquid components through a micromixer. The present invention furthermore relates to the lotions, emulsions, gels, creams and solutions prepared by the process according to the invention either for cosmetic use or, if corresponding pharmaceutical active ingredients have been incorporated, to the pharmaceutical formulations prepared.

0003660-092701